The making of Europe is a long-span project in which the European Parliament plays a key role. From a discourse analytical perspective, this thesis examines the ways in which the Members of the European Parliament collaboratively compete to construct and reinforce intergroup boundaries at public debates.

Nazli Avdan is a researcher at the Graduate School in Language and Culture in Europe at the Department of Culture and Communication, Linkoping University. This is her doctoral dissertation.

‘Collaborative Competition’
Stance-taking and Positioning in the European Parliament

Nazli Avdan